ABOUT CORINA

The child of hippie political activists whose unconventional upbringing made her stand out from her peers, Corina Rose turned to music to connect with the world around her. As a classically trained singer and music teacher, it wasn't until she picked up a guitar and began to write that the path and purpose for her music became clear. Drawing inspiration from Sade, Bob Marley, Marvin Gaye, and Amy Winehouse, the songs began to flow through her. Since then, she's been combining her passions and building a career that firmly and fully lives into the mystical love story.

Whether it's leading hundreds of students in song, playing in front of the Eiffel Tower and Berlin Wall, or participating as a vibrant member of San Diego's live music scene, every moment of her work is inspired to create connection. Playing with her band, Corina Rose Collective, is where she feels most happy and connected to Spirit. Her music has been described as "groovy" and "slow funk," and Corina likes to call it "sexy spiritual pop." Her sound is a unique blend of soul, jazz, reggae, and pop. Corina is inspired by traveling the world, ancient mysticism, and her obsession with nature. "The feeling of playing with other musicians and spreading good vibes through music is where true magic lives in my soul," she says.

Corina's transcendent love songs capture the journey of finding, experiencing, and connecting with the love that is inside us all. She loves to sing her story at festivals, venues, and unconventional spaces around the world, and it's her hope that you will join her, that you will feel the joy that inhabits her words and carry it with you as you go. Let her songs be your impetus to follow your art and your heart and gift the world with the wonder of you. She hopes to help you fall a little more in love with your own story, that you might be inspired to tell, sing, and live it well.
